Today's Gospel Matt: 7: 1-5

A beautiful, seamless tapestry

A priest friend of mine posted this on Facebook today. I liked it and thought I would share Fifteen years after my original heathen conversion to Christianity I had another, to Catholicism, and one of the great appeals of the Catholic faith is the sheer consistency and water-tight worldview that I inherited. A worldview which has been deeply and prayerfully considered, guided by the Holy Spirit and the authority of the successors of the apostles, since Jesus' time on earth. It may seem a stretch to an outsider—I know, I was there once too—but the way Catholic doctrine, dogma, and belief fit together is in a beautiful, seamless tapestry.

It's breath-taking, to be sure.

K. Albert Little – submitted by Angela D'Angelo

K. Albert Little became a Catholic at Easter 2015, he lives in Kitchener, Canada. He said, "What I thought I'd known about the Catholic Church was, in large measure, completely wrong. What I learned about the Catholic Church, instead, was more beautiful and bountiful than I ever, in my life, could've imagined." You can read his story of conversion at, The Cordial Catholic.

Winter Cold & Grace

As I contemplate Ted Kell's braving the cold in his annual Vinnies sleep-out, I'm reminded of the following poem by Les Murray.

John Drury

"Incorrigible Grace"

*St Vincent de Paul, old friend,
My sometime tailor,
I daresay by now you are feeding
The rich in Heaven.*

FRIENDS

KIT is something I look forward to each day. I enjoy seeing names of my friends and know we are thinking of each other.

Friends can be ...

Strength when we are vulnerable

Comfort when we are aching

Guidance when we are confused

The Eucharist is the Heart of Christ and the love of friends start and finish in the Heart of God. The significance of this really came to me on Friday, on the Feast of the Sacred Heart, the special feast day for all in our MSC parish. Keep up the good work.....

Purpose

In the deepest part of each of us there are always two things: the desire to become everything we can be, and the need to find out exactly what that is.

At the convergence of these two roads - at the point where faith in self becomes faith in something greater than ourselves - lies the meaning of life. There is simply something in life that all of us are meant to do. And someday the moment will come when, if we are true to ourselves, we will do it.
