

Jesus, who suffered on the cross to regain the authority for humanity that our first parents had surrendered, passed on that authority to the apostles and their successors. And he told them what to do with it: Love God and one another by making disciples. And in case they were wondering how many disciples to make or where, he was clear about that too: Make disciples of everyone, everywhere.

The church has a mission statement:
Make disciples.
That's it.

Evangelisation is in fact the grace and vocation proper to the Church, her deepest identity. She exists in order to evangelise. Evangelii Nuntiandi, Pope Paul VI
